In the first semester, to take place in Thessaloniki, students acquire the basic knowledge about European studies through three compulsory courses: the constitutional foundations of EU, its history and institutions and the programmatic positions of parties and stance of European citizens regarding the European enterprise. These three courses provide the basic background and the appropriate epistemological and empirical level of knowledge to advance to the next semesters. In particular the two former course provide students with the basic historical and institutional background about the EU, while the latter familiarizes them to a more empirical approach, as well, regarding the various dimensions of Euroscepticism.

In the second semester, also offered in Thessaloniki, students follow two compulsory courses and two elective courses. The compulsory courses offer a consolidation of knowledge in important and different aspects of European policies (the logic of multilevel governance and the EU policies and the consequences, at national and European level, of the creation of an EU area of freedom, security, and justice). Elective courses offer the possibility of deepening the role of European integration in more specific areas, either geographical areas (Southern Europe, Balkans, or Africa) or thematic (fundamental rights) facilitating students to direct their research to where they are most interested.

During the third semester that will take place in Turin, students delve deeper into the economic dimension of European integration as well as on EU's role in the global context. In addition, they can choose, depending on their interest, a foreign language (Arabic, Chinese or French). At the same time, they begin the preparation of the dissertation.

The fourth semester, which will also take place in Turin, includes a foreign language course (chosen by the student, as in the third semester if the student has not taken this course during the third semester), two compulsory course which look, through a comparative analysis, the functioning of European societies and the way the world economy operates today. In addition, this semester includes the completion and defense of the dissertation. The dissertation is written in the language teaching the program.

The language of instruction of the Program is English.

Courses and examination periods begin, and end, based on the academic calendar of each institution. In case of postponement of a course, its replacement is made within a reasonable time, which is announced through the website of the Program and by any other appropriate means.

The method of examination and grading for each course is proposed by the instructor and approved by the Curriculum Committee.

The evaluation in the individual courses is done through written or oral examinations, elaboration of assignments or a combination of the above.

The grading scale for the evaluation of the performance of postgraduate students for the Aristotle University of Thessaloniki is set from zero (0) to ten (10), as follows:

Excellent (8.5 to 10)

Very Good (6.5 to 8.5 not included)

Good (6 to 6.5 not included).

The passing grade is six (6) and upwards. Half-points are allowed. The Special Cooperation Protocol with the Dipartimento di Culture, Politica e Società stipulates the correspondence of the grading scale between the two departments.

The Curriculum Committee, at the request of the student who proposes the title of his/her dissertation, the supervisor and attaches a summary of the relevant proposal, shall appoint the dissertation supervisor and shall establish a three-member Examination Committee for the approval of the dissertation, one member of which shall be the supervisor. The members of the Examination Committee must have the same or related scientific specialisation as the subject of the Program.

The dissertation must be apr. 15.000 words, along with any footnotes or endnotes, not including the cover page and the bibliographic list at the end and must be written in English. The defense of the dissertation takes place before the Examination Committee on a date and place specified by the Curriculum Committee, in accordance with the academic calendar of the Universities involved, either in person or online. Following its approval by the Committee, it must be posted on the website of the relevant Department.

In exceptional cases, when there is an objective incapacitation or any other important reason, it is possible to replace the supervisor or member of the Examination Committee upon his/her request and by decision of the Curriculum Committee.

The dissertation is submitted to the library of each department in electronic form and in any other way specified by each Department. The dissertation file should be in conventional font, fully aligned, 1.5 line spacing, numbering at the bottom of the page, margins of 2.5 cm from all sides of the page. The Program's website shall provide a model cover of the dissertation.

The final grade of the Program is calculated based on the weighted average of each Program course and the dissertation. The weighting is made based on the credit units of each course and the dissertation and is calculated, with an accuracy of second decimal place, in the following way: the grade of each course, and of the dissertation is multiplied by the corresponding number of credit units (ECTS) and the sum of the products is divided by the minimum number of credits required to receive the degree.
